Welcome to my regular e-update column which each month will highlight the key events and news for busy practice managers and administrators.

Dear member,

As you'll have seen from the Winter 2014/5 edition of Practice Focus I'm absolutely delighted with our new partnership arrangement with DPAS Dental Plans which I'm sure will prove to be of benefit to both organisations.

Many of you will know that DPAS have worked with us for several years, sponsoring a number of initiatives as well as providing facilities to enable our members to pay their subscription through them. For those who don't know them, DPAS have been setting up and running cost effective and practice branded payment plans for the dental sector since 1996.

This new partnership with DPAS takes our relationship to a higher level and includes a three year deal providing the following support:-

- Financial support for the cost of running our membership publications Practice Focus and e-update;
- Advertising and editorial contributions within each edition of both publications;
- A 'welcome pack' for new ADAM members;
- Support towards running our local members' meetings;
- Sponsorship of our Practice Manager of the Year Award.

As you can see, this is really great news for ADAM members, especially as the support comes from an organisation we already know so well and who are such a good 'fit' with us.

It's interesting to look back at the members' survey we did last year in which we asked some questions about patient plans. Around 18% of respondents already work with DPAS but a surprising 32% simply don't offer any patient plan. So if you're one of the 32% or if your current arrangements aren't with DPAS, why not give the firm who support your Association a call – you'll find DPAS contact details at <http://www.dpas.co.uk/>.

This month's e-update includes the following:-

- If recruitment is causing you headaches then read the article by Sarah Buxton from LCF Law on page 5 which includes a helpful checklist to help ease your pain;
- ADAM Practice Manager of the Year 2014 – Hina Mistry – is in the Spotlight on page 3;
- NHS England's Friends and Family launches on 1 April 2015 – find out what it means for your practice on page 8;
- Forthcoming ADAM Marketing Seminars – with Early Bird rates if you're quick – find out how to book on page 9;
- Read about other training opportunities (on page 7) and the Latest News within dentistry (on page 4).

Lots to catch up on – happy reading!

Niki Boersma, President

Hina Mistry

In this continuing series focused on YOU, this month we meet and ask questions of Hina Mistry, ADAM Practice Manager of the Year 2014

Name: Hina Mistry

Job: Dental Practice Manager at 'R Dental Clinic' in Bradford.

Where do you live (and with whom): I live in Leeds.

Hobbies: I enjoy core fitness and cardio routines at the gym, socialising with my family and friends, and have a keen interest in food and nutrition.

How did you end up working in dentistry? After I successfully completed both Bsc and Msc in Human Nutrition I worked at the Nutrition Society as an administrator for 18 months. I then worked as an oral health promoter at King's College Hospital for 6 and half years. I was then approached and offered the opportunity to work as a Dental Practice Manager.

When did you first get involved with ADAM? I was first involved with ADAM when I started working as a Dental Practice Manager in July 2011.

What do you enjoy most about your role?

I thoroughly enjoy the challenge of making sure our Practice provides the highest care to all our patients. With increased litigation as well as increased patient expectations this challenge is forever changing.

What's the most challenging part of your role?

Ensuring that there is the right level of resource and experience to cover the dental service we provide, and that all staff members are fully motivated in their job roles. Additionally communicating and ensuring patients follow and understand the preventative advice on caries and periodontal disease.

Would you recommend a career in dentistry?

I would recommend a career in dentistry because it is an integrated part of healthy living. It is a very rewarding career.

And if you hadn't gone into dentistry, what would you be doing? If I hadn't gone into dentistry I would have found a position related to nutrition and public health.

GDC welcomes Which? call for greater clarity around dental costs

The General Dental Council (GDC) has announced that it welcomes the recent Which? report into dental treatment prices.

The GDC's 'Standards for the dental team', launched in September 2013 and which all dental professionals must follow, has this issue as one of its key principles.

The GDC believe it is essential for patients to be given clear information about pricing and options for NHS or private treatment and the GDC expects that dentists will provide this.

Standard 2.4 states: "You must give patients clear information about costs." Failure to clearly display a price list in surgeries or to communicate effectively with patients about their treatment options can lead to disciplinary proceedings being taken by the GDC.

The GDC has seen a steady increase in cases since its 2013 standards came into effect:

2012 - 33	2013 - 98	2014 - 114

The GDC actively encourages patients to ask questions of their dental professionals and sets out what they can expect in its 'Smile' leaflet.

CQC announces John Milne as new dental adviser

The Care Quality Commission has appointed John Milne, a practising dentist in West Yorkshire and the current Chair of the BDA's General Dental Practice Committee, as Senior National Dental Adviser.

In this role, John will work closely with CQC's primary medical services' senior management team and inspectors, along with dental providers and stakeholders, to help develop our new model. John will also work with our inspection teams to give expert advice on professional practice in dental care.

Dentists celebrate action on plain packs

The British Dental Association (BDA) has welcomed news that legislation on plain packaging of cigarettes is set to be fast-tracked.

BDA has campaigned vigorously for action on plain packs, and is a member of the Smokefree Action Coalition and a supporter of Action on Smoking and Health (ASH).

Tobacco use remains a key cause of gum disease and oral cancer, with treatment costing the taxpayer millions a year.

For more information go to <http://tinyurl.com/kyb9bq8>

John will take on the role in March this year, after his role as Chair of the BDA's General Dental Practice Committee comes to an end.

Freedom to Speak Up review welcomed by General Dental Council

The General Dental Council (GDC) has announced that it welcomes the independent review of whistleblowing in the NHS, 'Freedom to Speak Up', led by Sir Robert Francis QC.

The review provides advice and recommendations to ensure that NHS staff feel that it is safe to raise concerns. The review highlights the GDC's 2013 annual survey of registrants which asked dental professionals about their experiences of raising concerns.

GDC launches pilot scheme for local handling of performance concerns about dentists

A pilot scheme launched in January 2015 will aim to ensure that concerns about dentist's performance are handled where appropriate by the local NHS in England, rather than by the national regulator, the General Dental Council.

Currently both the GDC and the NHS have powers to take action against dentists where there are concerns about their performance. The GDC currently receives complaints about dentists, some of which could be handled by the NHS locally rather than through the GDC's fitness to practise processes.

The GDC is keen to ensure that any concerns about an NHS dentist's performance or fitness to practise are dealt with in the most proportionate and effective manner. This requires an early dialogue between the GDC and the NHS, which manages the contracts offered to dentists, to ensure that the GDC deals only with fitness to practise cases whilst the NHS deals with other issues of performance management.

The pilot, which begins this month, will aim to explore the full potential of this approach and will involve the GDC working with 5 NHS England Local Area Teams (LATs) over 12 months. The results of the pilot will be used to develop an approach that can be rolled out on a national basis.

British Society of Paediatric Dentistry (BSPD) calls for coordinated offensive on obesity and dental care

BSPD has recommended an offensive to tackle both obesity and dental decay to children and young people; in a new position statement BSPD highlights the diet and lifestyle factors common to the two conditions which are both alarmingly prevalent among Under 16's.

The Headache of Recruitment

I often act for Employers who have been landed with an Employment Tribunal claim for alleged acts of discrimination and/or harassment against the Practice Manager during the recruitment process. Discrimination claims can be made by job applicants who are never employed by you!

Further when you have a CQC inspection the Assessor will more than likely interview staff and ask your employees about the recruitment process. That being the case, you need to ensure you have a Recruitment Policy together with an Equality and Diversity Policy to ensure you follow a fair and reasonable process.

Recruitment is a time consuming and costly process and therefore it may be in your best interests to use a recruitment agent to source the candidate for you. If you undertake the process yourself, here are the key steps which all Practice Managers should consider:

1. Identify the vacancy

If it is the case of replacing an employee who is leaving, you may already have a job description to hand. However this may also be the opportunity to re-define the role and create a new job specification.

2. Advertise the vacancy

It is often in advertisements for job vacancies where discrimination claims arise. Therefore the actual content of the job description has to be carefully written. Practice Managers may fall short by unintentionally discriminating in the advertisement for example, would you allow the following advertisement?

“Young bubbly receptionist needed for our Practice. Part time hours available. Please contact ...”

3. Short listing and Interviewing

However you decide to select the interviewees, you must ensure that the process is fair, consistent and results in the best job applicant being appointed for the job.

When holding interviews you must ensure that the days on which you hold the interviews do not put any job applicant at an unfair disadvantage, for example, the dates and times do not clash with religious festivals.

It may also be worth considering having more than one person holding the interviews to ensure that a balanced and objective appointment is made. It is also best practice to have criteria against which to mark each applicant. This will make the interview more objective.

4. Making an offer of employment

Once a successful applicant has been identified, an offer letter should be sent setting out the job title, salary and any particular features of the job. It is also best practice to provide a contract of employment at this stage to ensure that the employee fully understands the terms of the job which they have been offered.

The offer letter should also contain conditions of employment, such as receipt of two clinical references which are satisfactory to you, confirmation that they can work in the UK, DBS check etc.

5. Withdrawing an offer

There are several reasons why an offer may be withdrawn including a change in business requirements; you have received information which casts doubt on the applicant; or a condition of the offer may not have been fulfilled.

Whatever the reason, you should make a note of the offer and retain documentary evidence and you must ensure that the reason for withdrawal of the offer is not one which could be discriminatory e.g.

because of the applicants age, gender reassignment, sex, sexual orientation, marriage and civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, race, religion or belief, and disability.

✓ Checklist

- There should always be a paper trail of the interview process undertaken.
- When you have a CQC inspection, the Assessor may ask to see this evidence to satisfy themselves that a just recruitment process has taken place.
- The paper trail should include:
 - Applicable recruitment and/or equal opportunities policies (which have been followed throughout the recruitment exercise);
 - ✓ Job description;
 - ✓ Person specification;
 - ✓ Selection criteria;
 - ✓ Any written test;
 - ✓ Notes of the short listing process (including handwritten notes or score sheets);
 - ✓ Interview questions;
 - ✓ Notes of interview;
 - ✓ Minutes of any interview panel discussions or decisions following interviews;
 - ✓ Records that show all those involved in the recruitment process had received appropriate training beforehand.

If you would like your Recruitment and/or Equality and Diversity Policy to be reviewed free of charge please contact Sarah Buxton at LCF Law on 0113 201 0407.

Sarah Buxton is a specialist healthcare employment solicitor who has acted for Practice Owners, practitioners and managers up and down the country. Sarah has a number of years' experience in this specialist field and now works in the Healthcare & Dental Team at LCF Law which offers an array of services including buying and selling practices, expense share, partnership and shareholders agreements, incorporations, employment, associate agreements, NHS disputes and regulatory issues.

Jo Phillpot talks about her experiences working with practice teams in her role as Practice Consultant for DPAS Dental Plans.

One of the team

“Having worked as a practice manager myself for a number of years, I’m really motivated to make their lives easier in any way I can. Coming from a dental background and being a qualified dental nurse, I spent five years as a head nurse/practice manager before joining DPAS, so I can really empathise with the pressures and constraints of the role.

Making sure the practice runs smoothly while putting the interests of patients first is a central part of the daily routine for practice managers, so when it comes to dental plans, they normally want a provider that has tried and tested systems in place to ease the administrative burden.

Most practice managers are awash with paperwork; compliance and regulations mean that they spend a lot of time filling in forms, so it’s a real advantage that the administrative side of a DPAS dental plan is so straightforward. Signing patients up to a plan couldn’t be simpler and our office-based team take care of all the rest.

The training modules we provide are another key area that I see making a great impact within practices, especially when working with new client or new team members. With themes ranging from plan promotion to communication skills and objection handling, I work closely with all concerned to make sure everyone is confident to carry out their roles.

One of the great things about my role at DPAS is that I’ve been able to continue working ‘in-practice’ on many of the challenges I enjoyed while I was a practice manager myself. But now, instead of looking after just one practice I help many practices, and it’s a lovely feeling to be treated as part of their team.”
